Our guide stands ready to usher you to the former hill station of Sapa. After a delectable breakfast at a local restaurant, savor a brief respite and make final preparations for your Sapa odyssey.

The journey begins on the road, veering onto a small path that winds down the valley to the Muong Hoa River along Y Linh Ho valley. Here, the trail leads to the Black H’mong community in Lao Chai village. Proud custodians of their culture, the Black H’mong boast distinctive traditions, a unique language, and indigo-blue attire. Continue to Ta Van village (1,200 m) to encounter the Zay people—a modest minority group of approximately 38,000 residing in the mountainous terrain of Northwest Vietnam. Though modernization has ushered changes, many Zay women still don traditional shirts in vibrant hues of purple, blue, or green.
